

Beverly Anderson

President, Global Consumer Solutions

Beverly Anderson is the President of Global Consumer Solutions at Equifax. She is responsible for the strategy, development, growth and profitability of direct and indirect businesses serving consumers with credit, identity and financial education products and services.

For more than three decades, Beverly has built businesses and delivered significant results in the Financial Services and Payments industries. She drove consumer and small business strategies, product strategies, and enterprise growth and profitability strategies for First USA (JPM Chase), Fleet (Bank of America) and American Express. Before joining Equifax, she was the Executive Vice President of Cards and Retail Services at Wells Fargo where she led consumer credit cards, co-brand cards, loyalty solutions, retail finance, digital payments and enablement capabilities. She has also held leadership roles managing auto loans, personal lines and loans, servicing, loan operations, collections and fraud operations.

Beverly graduated summa cum laude with a BS in Business from Florida A&M University and received her MBA with distinction from Harvard Business School.

She currently serves as co-president of the African-American Alumni Association and received the Kenneth A. Powell Award for Professional Achievement from the HBS African-American Student Union in 2019. Beverly is a former chair of the Card Policy Council of the American Banker Association and is a former Board Chair of the Council of Urban Professionals. Black Enterprise named Beverly one of its Most Powerful Women in Corporate America in 2019.
