Identity Fraud Can Hurt Your Employees and Your Bottom Line

Help employees fight back with ID Watchdog

It is growing harder for employees to protect their identities from getting into the wrong hands. They continue to face cybercrimes, like phishing and malware attacks, which have become more prevalent in recent years. Even those who are diligent with their identity could be like one of the 422 million individuals who had their data compromised in 2022.¹

You and your employees have work to do, but identity fraud can slow you down. With ID Watchdog[®], you can help provide your employees the protection they need to keep their identities — and their families — better protected from identity fraud so you can both have greater peace of mind.

Fraudsters don't discriminate — everyone can be a target

The effects of identity fraud can be wide-reaching, regardless of income, education, or generation. Even children can be a target as their identities can provide a blank slate to fraudsters and may go undetected for years.

With ID Watchdog, you can help employees better protect their loved ones of all ages. Each adult will get their own personalized account with the option to share alerts for added visibility. Children are better protected with exclusive features such as credit report lock, subprime loan block, and instant-on child credit monitoring. Employees can even add parents or grandparents that they care for physically or financially, regardless of where they live.

Identity fraud can cause many problems for many years, and victims may face:

Financial impact

Time Wasted

Emotional stress

This can lead to disruptions at work, which in turn could negatively impact employee productivity and your bottom line. Even worse, once someone has stolen personal information, they can continue to use it to commit fraud for years to come. In 2022, 50% of reported identity victims were repeat victims.²

Help reduce the risk of fraud for your employees with award-winning identity protection designed to fight fraud for the whole family.
