Talent Report Work Inform

Helps business leaders better protect against potential security risks

Having a hybrid workforce can help provide employers and employees with greater flexibility and scalability, but with this approach comes greater concern for employers around how to help lower competitive risk while preserving an employee's focus and productivity. And with predictions of more than 36 million employees working remotely by the year 2025¹, the need to understand an employee's employment status will continue to grow.

Talent Report™ Work Inform provides employers the ability to help mitigate risk while upholding an employee's integrity by monitoring their active employment status using verified employment data from The Work Number® database.

The database offers verified employment data for more than 146M active employment records from over 2.5M+ employer contributors.² This coverage helps employers reduce risk by helping ensure their employees are exclusively employed by their organization which can help solve issues before they arise.

Talent Report™
Work Inform notifies
HR when an employee
may be overemployed
with more than one full-time job potentially compromising the company's security or trade secrets.

Talent Report Work Inform can be used once pre-hire background checks are complete and your new employee has been onboarded. This helps employers to:

Lower competitive and security risks by better
helping ensure employees
are exclusively employed by their organization.

Better protect confidential information or "trade secrets."

Preserve employee focus and productivity.
